Presentation of the German-Albanian Development Cooperation

As part of German October, the German Embassy together with GTZ (technical cooperation) and KfW (financial cooperation) organized two events with a focus on development cooperation: In the presence of Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Economy, Ilir Meta, GTZ and KfW highlighted the progress achieved by Albania in 22 years of Albanian-German development cooperation. As part of Germany's support of Albania's EU aspirations and development, GTZ and KfW are active mainly in the areas of economic development, energy and water supply, and waste water disposal and the cross-sectoral issue of European integration. As part of the German October the well-established annual Press Tour gave journalists the chance to visit various German-Albanian development cooperation projects in Southern Albania, get background information and hold interviews with the new German Ambassador, Carola Müller-Holtkemper. The journalists visited two rehabilitated hydro-power plants in Bistrica, two electric power transformation substations in Saranda and Gjirokastra and a German expert in Gjirokastra active in developing cultural tourism and preserving local arts and crafts.

Additional information was provided on further current and future projects in the region such as the construction of a 110-kV power line and a 20 kV distribution system in Saranda and the rehabilitation of the water supply and waste water disposal systems in Saranda and Gjirokastra. This year's edition of the German October took the 20th anniversary of German unification as a starting point to look back on the developments in Albania and Germany marking the last 20 years. Many of the some 40 events during the German October examined how both societies deal with the communist past and their respective experiences of dictatorship. The German October is made possible with the help of German and Albanian partners and the contribution of sponsors.

Challenges and Development Opportunities for the Garment Industry

The Albanian garment industry offers abundant opportunities for businesses and investors wishing to take advantage of the proximity of Albania to the European Union market.

The prospects of development and opportunities for investment in the garment industry were the main topics discussed during all the events that took place on the occasion of the “Albanian Textile Week”. The week between 26 and 29 October 2010 included a number of activities, which highlighted problems facing the sector of garment industry in our country. On 29 October, a Conference was held on the "Challenges and Development Opportunities for the Garment Industry in Albania". The Conference was greeted by the German Ambassador in Tirana, Müller-Holtkemper; GTZ representative in Albania, Ulrike Gantzer-Sommer; and Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Economy, Trade and Energy, Ilir Meta. The German Ambassador in Tirana, Carola Müller-Holtkemper, considered the garment industry in Albania a promising sector that should be developed further.

"The coming weeks shall be important because they shall promote the EU integration of Albania, which will allow the domestic products to become more competitive in the European market", emphasized Holtkemper in the Conference on the "Challenges and Development Opportunities for the Garment Industry in Albania". Competitive prices, the favourable geographical position, readiness to produce on small orders, satisfactory level of creativeness, etc., are identified as some of the strong points of Albanian garment industry. "The Albanian Textile Week" was organized by the Ministry of Economy, with the support of the German Embassy, German Agency for Technical Cooperation (GTZ) and USAID, as well as Swiss Import Promotion Program (SIPPO).

The Textile Week will be followed from the visit of the representative of EURATEX - European Apparel and Textile Confederation, Mr. Francesco Marchi (General Director of EURATEX). Mr. Marchi will be in Tirana from 25 till 26 November 2010. The partnership with the European structures is an important step on the further development of the Albanian Garment Industry and therefore Mr. Marchi in his first visit in Albania will have meetings with representatives of the Albanian government, representatives of the association and chambers of the garment industry and will discuss the opportunities for future cooperation with the Albanian partners and their integration in the Apparel European structures and supportive projects.

Switzerland finances a new project in support of Children with Autism

The Swiss Cooperation Office in Albania (SCO-A) signed on 21 October 2010 an agreement with the Albanian Children Foundation "Domnick Scaglione" (ACF) for financing a project that aims to improve lives of children living with autism and their families. The project will enable the preparation and publication of a book and a guiding material for parents and health professionals, about autism and influence public opinion about autism in Albania. The agreement was signed by Swiss Cooperation's Country Director, Daniel Züst, and Mrs. Liri Berisha, President of the ACF "Domenick Scaglione". A total amount of over 2,000,000 Lek will be used to provide the latest guidance to be distributed free of charge among parents and health professionals. "There are many who stand to benefit from today's agreement. We look forward to seeing better treatment, empowered families and equipped health professionals for the sake of children suffering from autism", said Mr. Züst as he mentioned previous projects funded by the Swiss Cooperation. Mrs. Liri Berisha, expressed appreciation for the support provided by the Swiss Cooperation. "We thank Switzerland for supporting this project, which will serve to the children, their parents and health professionals.

This support shows that the awareness raising work done during the last two years by the foundation got not only the attention of the Albanian institutions but also of the international agencies operating in Albania", said Mrs. Berisha after the signing of the agreement.

Autism has come under special focus recently as it adversely affects the lives of children and may impair them for the rest of their lives. Prevalence of autism is estimated at 1 in 100 which means there could be approximately 32,000 children and adults suffering from autism in Albania. However, there is inadequate treatment and therapeutic services directed at this disorder. In the absence of public health structures that deal effectively with autism, the burden falls on parents and relatives of autistic children.

Health: USAID Conference Highlights Reform Options for Health Care

On 15 October 2010, in co-operation with the Albanian Academy of Sciences and the Academy of Sciences and Arts of Kosovo, and Health Ministries of both countries, USAID held a conference on the challenges in the region's health care system. Emphasis was placed on the need to manage available resources through efforts to reduce waste and abuse, and improve efficiency.

USAID Mission Director Joseph C. Williams announced a new USAID five-year, 8.5 million USD health care improvement programme aimed at making health care services more affordable and accessible in Albania. Today, only 3% of Albania's GDP is devoted to health system, less than half the European average. More than half (60%) of expenditures are informally paid out-of-pocket -- disproportionately affecting low-income populations and those who are not enrolled in the country's national health insurance programme.

Konferenca e 18-të Vjetore për Kirurgjinë, e promovuar nga Bashkëpunimi Italian për Zhvillim

On 22 October 2010, some 300 doctors and 130 medicine students met in Tirana on the occasion of the 18th Annual Conference on Surgery. Promoted by the Italian Development Co-operation and organised in co-operation with the Department of Surgery of the University Hospital Centre Mother Teresa, the workshop attracted international surgeons and medical professionals. During this 18th edition, special focus has been given to emergency surgery, identifying new practices and techniques for first-aid interventions. The workshop is conceived as an annual exercise of vocational training and its proceedings have been divulged among Albanian surgeons in order to foster information sharing and clinic best-practices exchange. Francesco De Luigi, Chargé d'Affaires of the Italian Embassy, opened the workshop stressing the engagement of the Italian Development Cooperation in strengthening the National Health Service, an engagement that Italy is now undertaking with a financial commitment of 12 mill Euros for the rehabilitation of five polyclinics in Tirana, Korça, Gjirokastra and Peshkopi, the equipment of the National Traumatological Centre in Tirana and the restructuring of first-aid facilities in Skodra and Puka.

USAID Donates Equipment to Albania's Maternity Hospital

In October, Albania's first national training centre for obstetrics and gynaecology opened at the Queen Geraldina Maternity Hospital in Tirana. The centre, which is operated in cooperation with the University of Tirana Medical Faculty, received 10,000 USD worth of medical equipment from USAID that will allow medical students to practice safer and more effective clinical procedures for delivering babies and caring for mothers in Albania. According to Ministry of Health 2008 figures, maternal mortality is still high compared with other European countries, with an estimated 21 deaths per 100,000 live births. In partnership with the Ministry of Health and its institutions throughout Albania, USAID has worked for several years to support programmes to improve the quality of maternal and child healthcare in order to reduce in maternal and infant mortality rates.

Millennium Challenge Corporation: AmCham Study Analyses Usage of the e-Procurement System

In October, the American Chamber of Commerce in Albania (AmCham) published the findings of a monitoring report on the usage of Albania's Electronic Procurement System (EPS). According to the report, EPS users, businesses and contracting authorities assessed the system as both effective and user-friendly, particularly in terms of savings in time and money, transparency and secure procedures. Yet internet service, particularly outside Tirana, remains an issue. The report was conducted with the support of the Millennium Challenge Corporation Albania Threshold Program II (MCCA2), administered by USAID. AmCham conducted 300 face-to-face interviews and focus groups with businesses in all 12 districts, with contracting authorities' procurement experts and with members of bid evaluation commissions. Interviews focused on access to EPS for public officials at the central and local government level and businesses that participate in public tenders, as well as on the system's fairness, user-friendliness, transparency, and effectiveness. AmCham presented its findings and recommendations the Albanian Public Procurement Agency that manages the EPS, to representatives of the business community and public institutions that use the system, and to civil society organizations and international donors. "U.S. assistance to Albania through both stages of the MCC Threshold Programs has aimed to improve the business and investment climate in the country by establishing a series of e-government systems that streamline burdensome administrative procedures and increase transparency. And while the reforms have made a substantial impact, in the long-term Albania's civil society will increasingly play a more prominent role to ensure that services are continuously improved and are sustainable." said the Director of Threshold Programmes for the Millennium Challenge Corporation, Bruce Kay. EU, OSCE project launches campaign to promote use of new address system by Albanian citizens

A public awareness campaign to promote the use of Albania's new standardized address system was launched on 27 October 2010, in framework of the project "Modernisation of Administrative Address and Civil Registration Systems", funded with EUR 2.5 million by the EU, and additional funds by the OSCE and US government and implemented by OSCE.

The campaign informs about the new address system and about the benefits of using official addresses instead of the informal reference points used so far. The launch of this campaign comes at the end of a long project of most tangible results on the modernisation of Albania's civil registry and address system. Albania's new civil registry and new address system will improve public services for Albanian citizens by way of improving communication. To that end, citizens need to be made aware of the new system, of their new addresses and need to use them. Citizens will be informed of how to employ the new system through newspaper and television advertisements.

Luigi Brusa, Chargé d'Affaires of the European Union Delegation to Albania, declared that "The quality of the state services is highly dependent on a sound address system that can be referred to and learned by all. Albania now has such a system. But it needs to be used and learned in order to bring the promised benefits".

Ambassador Eugen Wollfarth, Head of the OSCE Presence, emphasized that "The new system will ensure better quality and faster public services. The addresses contribute toward better election and rule-of-law processes, and help businesses prosper. The address system will be connected to the National Register of Civil Status in order to provide a unique address to every registered person."

The long-term success of the new address system and related undertakings, such as the 2011 Census depend on government will on inter-institutional cooperation, and on the collaboration authorities, such as the General Directorate of the Civil Status, Civil Status Offices and Urban Planning Offices.

Albanian Journalists meet to discuss issues related to consumer protection in Albania

On 11 October 2010, some 20 representatives from the print and electronic media in Albania participated in a three days meeting on the topic of consumer protection organized by the General Directorate of Trade Policy of the Ministry of Economy, Trade and Energy and the United Nations Joint Programme on Economic Governance, Regulatory Reform and Pro-Poor Development. The meeting was opened by the General Director of the Trade Policy Directorate, Besian Pesha, and the UNDP Programme Officer, Mr. Eno Ngjela. The meeting aimed to familiarize participants with the provisions of the Consumer Protection Law and discuss how to build public awareness about their rights as consumers, better report cases of violations of these rights and thus be one of the actors in the protection of consumer rights. The Law on Consumer Protection, adopted in April 2008, is aligned with EU consumer protection legislation and aims at protecting the rights of consumers in the market place. However, there is a perception that breaches of the law are common and more needs to be done to inform consumers about its provisions so they protect themselves from unfair commercial practices. One of the aims of the UN Joint Programme on Economic Governance, Regulatory Reform and Pro-Poor Development is to support the work of the Ministry in the area of consumer rights protection and the implementation of the Law. The discussions on
